"Wonderful teachers" highlight the Manpower Training Program for at least one participating student.

The federally financed program trains unemployed and under-employed persons.

Praising the presentation of material and individual help which manpower teachers have given trainees—at least in the 18-week business course in which the 55-year-old woman is enrolled—the student declared, "I'm completely sold on it."

Much Material

Her only criticism: "They are giving us so much material that perhaps we're not getting it all soaked up."

"I wish the course were longer, not only to take a bit more time for the material being given, but also so that we could go into it in more depth. It wouldn't hurt us to learn more."

And many of her 24 classmates, ranging in age from 17 to 55, express the same sentiments, although some are anxious to get out.

"The younger ones seem the most anxious to finish," she said.

The manpower program, 100% financed by federal funds, was set up in the Lincoln Public Schools in June 1963 by the State Education and Labor Departments.

The money was authorized by the Manpower Development and Training Act, separate from the Economic Opportunity Act.

Surveys Openings
The Division of Employment Surveys job openings and determines what courses need to be offered by manpower to train persons available for those jobs. It also handles all selection of students, according to manpower coordinator Darrell Grell.

Heads of families receive $35 per week plus $5 for each dependent. Students who live outside the city are given $5 per day subsistence, and Lincolnites receive bus fare to school. Selection preference is given to heads of families.

The recently widowed woman hopes to get a job in a bank after her training had been self-employed in her home. She enrolled in manpower because being alone was "too depressing. I needed to get out."

She considered attending a business college but found tuition too expensive. Neither could she afford to be in school the length of time it would have involved.

Hesitation
"There is some hesitancy in applying for manpower training and funds." I suppose some people consider it a bad reflection on themselves—having to go back to school.

It never has made a any difference to me or to my children, all college graduates," she said. "Most people don't know what I'm talking about when I say I'm in the program. They just aren't aware it exists."

The eight different courses offered in the Lincoln manpower program—clerical, stenographic, office machines, practical nursing, dental assistance, agribusiness, culinary arts, registered nursing and sales—vary in length from 8 to 40 weeks according to the course and amount of work desired in each one.

8-DAY FLIGHT LIKELY

AEROSPACE UNDER FIRE ... Million Dollar Waste Charged

Washington (AP) — Congressional investigators accuse the Air Force's big think factory—Aerospace Corp.—of wasting millions of taxpayers' dollars and question its over-all value.

A House Armed Services Subcommittee released a report Sunday night detailing a wide range of what it calls loose and extravagant practices by Aerospace Corp. in management, personnel and fiscal fields.

And it challenges Air Force reliance "on the management concept which Aerospace represents."

But Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert simultaneously released a statement calling Aerospace "a vital national resource" and asserting the subcommittee's findings are too limited in scope to form a basis for evaluating the corporation's over-all worth.

Value Contributions
Zuckert goes on to credit Aerospace with a long list of valuable contributions to major missile and space programs.

In Los Angeles a spokesman said Aerospace Corp. had no comment beyond Zuckert's statement.

The company provides systems engineering and technical direction on military space and missile programs for the Air Force. It employs 1,750 engineers and scientists and subordinate personnel.

The subcommittee's report accuses Aerospace of:

—Spending $22 million to purchase land and construct facilities at El Segundo and San Bernardino, Calif., when available government facilities could have been used "at a savings of millions of dollars."

Frivolous Expenses
—Frivolous expenditures" for such things as subsidized meals and country club memberships for executives and "elaborate and frequent entertainment."

—Handling personnel problems "of potential security implications with excessive forbearance for the individuals involved at the expense of proper safeguarding of the interests of national security."

—Paying "unusually high starting salaries . . . very high salary scales for management . . . unlimited sick leave, exorbitant relocation allowances."

The subcommittee says that because of its tax-free status as a non-profit corporation, Aerospace "receives a higher percentage of fee in terms of retained income than a commercial firm."

The House group explains that although its hearings had been directed at Aerospace's management the evidence raised questions over how much control Aerospace exercises "over essentially military decisions."

Question Of Reliance

There is also a question, the subcommittee says, of "the wisdom of continued reliance by the Air Force on the management concept which Aerospace represents."

The Air Force doesn't escape the congressional group's criticism.

It says the Air Force was negligent in failing to require Aerospace to abide by established policy."

Zuckert says that many of the subcommittee's findings in cost areas involve either matters that have been corrected by Aerospace or are under negotiation with the Air Force with a view to reducing charges.

Zuckert's statement says also:

"Mismanagement in the slightest degree cannot be condoned. The subcommittee's findings should prove helpful in pointing out further areas where improvement is in order. These findings, however, involving only a small part of the operations of this important organization are not a sufficient basis for assessing the worth of a vital national resource such as the Aerospace corporation."

Cooper Breaks His Own Mark

. . . PAIR TOLD TO SLEEP MORE

Space Center, Houston, Tex. (AP) — America's weary Gemini 5 astronauts had orders to sleep more Monday. And Gordon Cooper was doing just that when he broke his personal space flight record.

The space twins sped almost silently around the world as they recuperated from two troublesome days in space with a pesky fuel cell aboard their spacecraft.

Gene Krantz, night flight director, said:

"We are keeping the space flight crew tasks to a minimum so they can get a maximum amount of rest."

24-Hour 60-Ahead
Although the present go-ahead is only for another 24 hours, flight director Christopher C. Kraft said confidently:

"I don't see anything that would stop us from eight days at this moment."

During the 22nd orbit Cooper surpassed his old mark of 34 hours and 20 minutes in space, set in 1963. Ironically, on a day when much of the talk was of the astronauts' sleeplessness, Cooper was napping at the time. It came at 6:21 p.m., CST, while the spaceship passed south of Oklahoma.

Neither has been particularly hungry, they ate only parts of two meals the first day. They sounded alert and cheerful, and appeared to be enjoying the scenery.

Cooper reported that he could clearly see Cape Kennedy—where Gemini 5 blasted off at 8 a.m. Saturday—and there was this conversation with astronaut James A. McDivitt in the control room in Houston.

McDivitt: "Can you see the pads very easily?"

Cooper: "Roger, you can see the pads. You can see the causeway."

McDivitt: "Roger, they really stand out, don't they, with that contrast?"

Cooper: "They sure do."

But judging from interspace conversations, the chief worry on the ground Sunday was: why aren't you guys sleeping as the schedule called for?

Talk About Sleep
Several conversations dealt with sleep, lack of.

Some space exchanges Carnarvon, Australia, control: "Gemini 5, Houston surgeon is a little concerned about your lack of sleep. We'd like a status report on each of you at this time concerning your fatigue level."

Conrad: "We just been camping about 40 minutes on and 40 minutes off."

Later Dr. Berry came on to talk about the sleep problem which probably was the more surprising since Cooper and Conrad are champion sound sleepers. Cooper napped readily and constantly during his 34-hour flight in 1963.

Berry: "Gemini 5, this is surgeon, Gordo, tell me about this sleep story here for a second. We're having trouble trying to get it straight on the ground what both of you have done with your sleep. As we figure it from your reports so far it appears that you've had roughly two hours apiece. Is that affirm, or have you had more than this?"

Cooper: "That's about right, maybe a little bit of a nap in addition to it."

Attended Church
Back on earth, the astronauts' families went to church.

Mrs. Cooper and her two teen-age daughters attended the First Methodist Church in Seabrook, Tex., a few miles from the space center.

About five miles away, in La Porte, Tex., Mrs. Conrad and her parents went to St. John's Episcopal Church. The four rambunctious Conrad boys didn't go along, and the irrepressible Pete, the oldest at 10, explained why he was absent.

"My Sunday pants aren't dry," he said.

Disagreement
In the dispute with the Soviet news agency, there was this major disagreement.

Tass said that in an effort to break the present space record—119 hours and 6 minutes, held by the Russian Valery Bykovsky—the United States had used untried equipment. The object, Tass said, was to beat the Russians at any price.

"That's not true," John Hodge, mission control director for Gemini 5, said. "I don't believe we are doing that. I know very well we weren't told to."

"We were ready to launch. This kind of thing can happen to any piece of equipment, no matter how many times you test it."

District 76's Pupils Worth About $1 Million Each

By JOHN DeCAMP

Star Staff Writer

A one-room one-teacher country school which is surrounded on three sides by the city of Lincoln may very well be one of the wealthiest schools in the world. And it is constantly becoming even wealthier.

Each of the eight pupils who attended the little school last year represented about $1 million in taxable property, or more than $250,000 of assessed valuation.

Until a couple of years ago, Lancaster County School District 76 was just another one-room country school. District 76 is south of the state penitentiary on the west side of U.S. 77. Then came the development of the now well-known "industrial tract" and the millions of dollars it represents.

Rags To Riches
District 76 was in the very heart of this area. Each time a Lincoln business moved a plant or warehouse into the developing industrial tract, District 76 edged a niche higher in its rags-to-riches course. The development still continues and 76 is not complaining one bit.

Yet with all its wealth, District 76 is really quite a normal, average rural school.

The students use the same textbooks and materials that students all over the rest of the state use. And the teacher receives about the same salary as other country school teachers.

If you ask the students they will tell you that "being rich hasn't made studying and learning any less difficult." And the school doesn't sport any gold doorknobs.

So what is unique about the school if it is not the instructional received?

Lowest Tax Rate
The amazing thing about this school is the taxation required to operate the school. It is the lowest in the state. While other country schools throughout the state struggle to keep living by imposing ever higher mill levies, District 76 does not even worry.

For District 76 lives on a mill levy so low it is almost funny.

The 1964-65 school year saw a general fund mill levy of 0.64 mill per $100 of assessed valuation. This is 31 times as much as District 76's. Lincoln's general fund mill levy is more than 65 times as high as District 76's.

Why?

The immediate question that comes to everyone's mind is "Why has District 76 not been annexed and brought into the city since it is completely surrounded on three sides by the city limits?"

City-County Planning Director Douglas Brogden said that city planners had deliberately left the little school outside the city limits.

"If the city annexes the school, all we have is a building," Brogden said. "The children would still live on farms outside the city limits. Only when we can take the entire area the school serves, do we want to bring the school district inside the city limits."

Vientiane, Laos (UPI)—Maj. Gen. Kong Le, commander-in-chief of the neutralist army, left Vientiane for Paris. After a visit in France, Kong Le goes to London Sept. 14 and to the United States Sept. 29. This is his first visit to these countries. He hopes to return to Vientiane in late October.

London (UPI)—Sinistral fever seethed this week in this most sinistral of all nations—a left-handed whelk has been discovered.

It may not be common knowledge in the outside world, but one out of five country cricketers (the major cricket leaguers) are indeed sinistral.

As the world knows, there have been recorded only seven sinistral examples of these large marine snails.

Whelks, technically, don't have hands; conchologically speaking, a left-handed whelk merely allows its shell to spiral in an anti-clockwise direction.

The news, from a Jonas Oxley of Walton-on-the-Naze, sent fascinated students into a dither of excitement.

The British, it seems, have always been more excited than most others in sinistral behavior. Perhaps it's because this land has a higher percentage of left-handed men—than any other land where such vital statistics are kept.

This is a country where much ambidextrous money (there is no bias against left-handedness—at least, none has been manifest lately) is spent on research into left-handed scissors, can openers, potato peelers and even pen knives.

Richard Jones of Rte. 3 Lincoln is a firm believer that the best way to learn the dairy business is to have a 4-H club project or engage in Future Farmers of America (FFA) livestock projects.

"The best way to learn is in getting experience and help from others, and there is no better place to come into contact with this kind of assistance than at a livestock show or fair," says Richard who will be a junior at Waverly High School this fall.

Richard has selected guernsey dairy cattle for his projects.

"I studied all of the breed literature and noted that guernseys are good producers and have a high butterfat content in their milk. This is what I thought would be most important in the dairy business," said the young dairyman.

The showman was looking forward to his next two competitive events, the Lancaster County Fair that begins Tuesday and the State Fair.

His most recent show was the District Dairy Show at Seward where his guernsey entry was awarded a blue ribbon.

Vegetables Hold Commercial Hope In W. Nebraska

Mitchell — Vegetables having promise for commercial production in western Nebraska include sweet corn, peas, cole crops, and root crops such as carrots, table beets and onions, according to Ned Lynn, horticulturist at the Scotts Bluff Experiment Station near here.

The University of Nebraska scientist told farmers at the 54th annual Field Day at the station that vegetable research is being conducted at Scotts Bluff and in other areas to obtain information about processing vegetables and to influence processors to locate in Nebraska.

Statewide, the vegetable research program is six years old, and two years old at Scotts Bluff. Lynn said companies which locate in the state would broaden farm income and give employment to individuals in the community.

Two processing plants are located in Nebraska at the present, in Hastings and Fremont and another company from Omaha is investigating conditions here.

Vegetables Hold Commercial Hope In W. Nebraska

Mitchell — Vegetables having promise for commercial production in western Nebraska include sweet corn, peas, cole crops, and root crops such as carrots, table beets and onions, according to Ned Lynn, horticulturist at the Scotts Bluff Experiment Station near here.

The University of Nebraska scientist told farmers at the 54th annual Field Day at the station that vegetable research is being conducted at Scotts Bluff and in other areas to obtain information about processing vegetables and to influence processors to locate in Nebraska.

Statewide, the vegetable research program is six years old, and two years old at Scotts Bluff. Lynn said companies which locate in the state would broaden farm income and give employment to individuals in the community.

Two processing plants are located in Nebraska at the present, in Hastings and Fremont and another company from Omaha is investigating conditions here.

Timely Winter Wheat Planting Important

Timely planting of the winter wheat crop is extremely important, according to Duane Foote, secretary of the Nebraska Grain Improvement Association.

Nebraska farmers usually tend to plant too early, he said. Seeding too early can cause increased loss from hessian fly, wheat streak mosaic, root rots, and leaf rust infection in the fall.

Excessive fall growth wastes moisture. Moisture stress can make the plants more vulnerable to disease and insects which may show up in the spring as "winter damage."

In eastern and southern areas where hessian fly is often a problem, planting should be delayed until the fly-safe date — especially when fly susceptible varieties are being planted, Foote said. The use of fly resistant varieties, Ottawa and Warrior, will reduce the damage in areas where they are adapted. Gage is moderately resistant and Scout and Omaha, although susceptible, usually do well in the presence of fly.

Experiments show that best planting dates are closely associated with elevation and length of growing season, he said. At an elevation of 4,000 feet, the optimum average planting date is about September 10. This planting date should be advanced one day for each 100 feet of increase in elevation and delayed one day for each 100 feet of decrease in elevation. This rule of thumb would make September 1 the optimum seeding date at an elevation of 5,000 feet and September 15 the most desirable at 3,500 feet.

If moisture is scarce, it may be desirable to plant a few days earlier. When moisture is limited, the new seed is told of the necessity of applying insecticides properly in order to avoid harmful residues on or in foods and feed crops and in livestock. They are also urged to wear protective clothing and equipment as specified on the container labels and to take special care in handling plants treated with certain chemicals.

Agriculture Handbook No. 290, "Suggested Guide for the Use of Insecticides to Control Insects Affecting Crops, Livestock, and Households—1965," again stresses the importance of following directions and heeding all precautions on insecticide-container labels.

Users are told of the necessity of applying insecticides properly in order to avoid harmful residues on or in foods and feed crops and in livestock. They are also urged to wear protective clothing and equipment as specified on the container labels and to take special care in handling plants treated with certain chemicals.

Agriculture Handbook No. 290 may be obtained for $1.00 from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

The dairymen really have a problem and it is caused more by government red tape than any other one source.

For a long time the dairymen have unsuccessfully attempted to secure a pesticide residue tolerance for milk, something that practically every other food product has today.

Pesticides have been instrumental in enabling Americans to become the most efficient producers of a wholesome food supply in the world.

This fact is acknowledged by the dairymen, by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and recognized generally throughout the world. It is also well known that practicalists seem so strict in its limitation of the pesticide residue.

Payments Expired

Since the indemnity payments have expired dairymen feel that the Food and Drug Administration is again pressing the matter.

California dairymen are attempting to secure a pesticide tolerance for DDT. It is expected that it may take the National Academy of Scientists almost 18 months to approve or make a recommendation on the request.

In the meantime the dairyman is confronted with the situation that if he doesn't use modern pesticides he is a ready target for bugs and insects to eat up his crops.

If he does use the advantages of modern agriculture he could wind up with a pesticide residue in his milk that would put him out of business.

Russian Roulette

If the dairyman buys some feed he is almost playing Russian roulette because it could have been sprayed with a farm chemical, and he could trigger a situation again that would be financially disastrous.

During the regional meetings of the National Milk Producers Federation, including the one held in Omaha, this is equal to the worry dairymen have in low prices for their product.

Dairying is one of the most labor demanding agricultural endeavors we have. It doesn't seem fair to put such an extra worry on a group that are producing a product we wouldn't do very well without.

In fact I think the government ought to find some special decoration to present to these men as a small reward for someone asked to do business under such an impossible situation.

Another gripe of the dairyman is that when federal milk pricing orders are considered someone always points a finger at the 5% to 8% actual excess of milk and says because of this the price should stay down.

"Why doesn't the government think about this when labor asks for a raise. We have had chronic unemployment which is a pretty good comparison with excess milk, but it doesn't figure in on setting wages. We don't expect the working force of the dairy to be pulled down by those not on the payroll," say dairymen.

Nebraska's Three Rust Resistant Wheat Varieties In Big Demand

Nebraska's three new rust resistant wheat varieties are in big demand, not only in Nebraska, but also in several surrounding states, according to Dean Lancaster, secretary-manager of the Nebraska Crop Improvement Association.

Another gripe of the dairyman is that when federal milk pricing orders are considered someone always points a finger at the 5% to 8% actual excess of milk and says because of this the price should stay down.

"Why doesn't the government think about this when labor asks for a raise. We have had chronic unemployment which is a pretty good comparison with excess milk, but it doesn't figure in on setting wages. We don't expect the working force of the dairy to be pulled down by those not on the payroll," say dairymen.

Farmers interested in getting the new seed can get a Certified Seed Directory from their county agent.

In fact, he said, all seed of the Lancer variety has already been sold. The reason is that Lancer performed outstandingly in western Nebraska, where black stem rust was particularly severe.

Older varieties were hit hard by the rust.

Farmers in central and western Nebraska who missed getting Lancer seed can still plant a rust resistant variety, however, he said. Scout can be substituted in that area although its winter-hardiness is somewhat less. The supply of certified Scout seed is good at present.

Scout seed will probably all be gone by seeding time, Lancaster said, so farmers should buy their seed promptly.

In the eastern part of the state, Gage wheat has also

A Step Toward Automated Irrigation

Mitchell — A first step toward automation on irrigated farms is installation of underground pipe, according to Paul Fischbach, Extension irrigationist at the University of Nebraska.

Fischbach said a major advantage of underground pipe is that it permits farmers to start irrigation operations on time. Research has shown, he said, that only a slight delay in the first irrigation can reduce crop yields as much as 30 bushels an acre.

Fischbach spoke to farmers at the 54th annual Field Day at the University's Scotts Bluff Experiment Station. He noted other conveniences of underground pipe, such as:

(1) Having irrigation structures out of the way so farmers can till over them for weed control;

(2) Being able to harvest or till crops near the pumping plant or source of water while irrigating, without having to move or re-set pipe;

(3) Seepage and evaporation losses are nearly eliminated; water can be completely controlled without danger of ditch wash-outs or overflows, and problems with weeds along sides of ditches are eliminated.

At present, costs of installation vary from $1.35 to $2.25 a foot, depending upon the type of pipe, he said.

Types of pipe presently available are concrete, cement-asbestos, steel, and plastic-coated aluminum. The newest developments, including plastic-coated aluminum and plain plastic types, have not been in use long enough to predict how long they will last.

The cement-asbestos type appears at present to be the most corrosion-resistant, considering all soil types.

Winnebagos End Year's Powwows

Lincoln Star Special
Winnebago—Nebraska's two biggest Indian celebrations of the year came to an end here Sunday night as the Nebraska Winnebago Tribe wound up its annual powwow.

The Omahas at nearby Macy held their annual powwow one week earlier. The mood there had been dampened by several deaths of powwow members, despite the fact that following old custom the grieving families withdrew from the powwow area to allow the celebration to continue.

At Winnebago several hundred dancers crowded an enlarged dancing arena despite cold and rainy weather, which cut the number of spectators more than it reduced the number of dancers, who came from many tribes and many different states.

Both powwows are annual homecoming celebrations for members of the tribe who live away.

And the powwow grounds at both Winnebago and Macy feature campgrounds where many local people, as well as many visitors, camp for the four-day events.

The Winnebago powwow program this year announced the forthcoming centennial powwow which will be held in 1966 from July 29 through Aug. 7.

The Winnebago celebration originated in 1866 as a welcome-home festival for a group of Winnebago warriors who under the leadership of Chief Little Priest had been serving in Company A, Omaha Scouts, of the Nebraska Volunteers, in the Indian wars of the northwest plains.

The Omaha powwow is a continuation of an annual celebration held even earlier to celebrate the end of a good east Nebraska. The Winnebago Tribe came to Nebraska's Omaha Tribe via Minnesota and South Dakota, from Wisconsin in ancestral homeland in north 1863.

Find New Way To Stop Shortness Of Breath, Gasping For Air In Asthma Attacks

Formula Doctors Prescribe Most Opens Locked Bronchial Tubes. Stops Attacks, Restores Free Breathing In Minutes.

New York, N.Y. — A modern medical formula has proved amazingly effective in relieving shortness of breath and difficulty in breathing for asthma sufferers. It stops choking attacks in minutes and restores normal breathing again. Prompt use helps severe attacks from even starting.

This formula is so effective doctors prescribe it more than any other. It comes in tiny tablets called Primatecne. Primatecne promptly opens up locked bronchial tubes and keeps them open for hours. Trapped air is released. You can breathe in and out freely again. It relieves coughing, calms panic. Brings you back to normal fast. Taken as directed, Primatecne is so safe it can now be sold without prescription in most states. Always carry Primatecne with you.

Castro Chooses Moscow

By PIERRE J. HUSS

(Note: William O. Dobler, The Star's editor, is on vacation. Today's column is by the international news analyst, Pierre J. Huss.)

NEW YORK—Experts on the Caribbean area have come to the conclusion that the mysterious disappearance of Ernesto "Che" Guevara from the hierarchy of Fidel Castro indicates the bearded communist dictator has decided to cast Cuba's lot with Moscow and against Peking.

The wolfish Che, a trained terrorist and crafty revolutionary, considered the mastermind of Castro's revolt and spokesman for Latin American communists, to boot, was dismissed without fanfare from his post as minister for industry. A year ago this would have been impossible, and his ousting might even have precipitated the downfall of Castro himself. But Red politics and world events change, tossing into discard those who stand in the way. So it happened that the ruthless Che stood in the way of political pressures and changes in Cuba's drift, and had to go. Those who knew the professional Argentinian revolutionary of many bloody deeds in Latin America said he saw the Cuban revolution only as the stepping-stone to communist seizure of power in all of South America.

Since force more than slow subversion by sabotage and agitation was the essential instrument of his plot for conquest, he learned far more heavily toward the Chinese communists than toward the Russians. He was favoring the support and activity in Cuba of Chinese Red agents so openly in months preceding his disappearance that Moscow finally must have demanded Guevara's head as the price for granting Castro the money and economic aid needed by him so desperately.

A Moscow promise of larger money gifts and economic aid would hardly be enough in itself in the face of a heavy loss to Castro of his most fervent revolutionary partner. So it is entirely possible that Moscow also gave silent endorsement to Castro's plans for spreading subversion and revolt throughout Latin America, but without involving his own troops except those disguised as volunteers and agents trained in terror and sabotage.

The experts tell me that in any case, Castro never was too enthusiastic with the expansion of the Peking influence in Latin America and the constant arrival in Havana of "trade" or "technical" groups from Red China. They were getting into his hair at the same time Soviet suspicion and even alarm began to push him toward the choice of dealing with Moscow or Peking. I am told that Castro never displayed any doubts that in the final analysis he had to depend on Moscow for survival and that to him was the Red dragon in a remote part of the world. That sort of mentality and outlook were bound to lead him into a direct clash with Che.

Castro has a long memory. He still burns over the humiliating treatment he got from Nikita Khrushchev, who settled the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 at the expense of Fidel and his cohorts. They were the laughing stock and the scapegoats who had been cast aside with impunity by the Russian when the U.S. said "Boo!" That made it easy for Che to swing the Chinese communists to the forefront.

Consequently the fall of Khrushchev must have been regarded with personal satisfaction by Castro. It undoubtedly gave him new reason to hope that the new leadership in the Kremlin would revive and beef up the world revolutionary aspects of Soviet foreign policy.

He realized only too well, as he does today, that failure by Moscow to exploit a forceful communist penetration policy in non-communist parts of the world can only hamper and discourage the expansion of his own plans for conquest in the Western Hemisphere.

He cannot spread a communist revolt over part or all of Latin America unless he has back of him the giant of that movement and conspiracy—and that is the Soviet Union.

Although the Kremlin leadership failed to measure up to Castro's illusions, he is aware most acutely of the fact that Moscow realizes fully that Fidel Castro is the outstanding communist hero of the Western hemisphere and that his voice is listened to in Latin America above those of all other extremists and Reds. He has faded in popular minds, perhaps, as the national image of the liberator and champion of the downtrodden, but Moscow needs him as much as he needs Moscow if communism is to remain a future force and influence on this side of the Atlantic.

Finally, the Soviets can hardly have the intention or desire to part with their most formidable outpost so firmly implanted 90 miles off the North American coast, or cast aside a satellite willing to march in step with them rather than with the Peking warlords. Under these circumstances, the sacrificing of Che by Castro and the new deal by Moscow with Castro should hardly come as a surprise.

The Erie Canal Moral

Many Americans today believe the Erie Canal went out of business a few years after the first railroads were built. But that is not so. The old New York Ditch which began to be in 1817 is still doing business. It hauls a great deal of grain and oil from Buffalo, via Rome, between Lake Ontario and Lake Erie to the Hudson River, at Albany, and thence to New York City.

We bring that up, not that Nebraska even had a great commercial canal, but to prove that what the majority thinks is folly can work out to be the greatest community builder of them all.

The reason that the federal government never had a piece of the canal was that the President of the United States in 1817 branded the scheme as a piece of wholesale folly and the then Congress heartily agreed. But fools finally prevailed and built the ditch and it surpassed their wildest expectations.

The Farm Bill

The administration's farm bill passed the House and without much further fragmentation it should pass the Senate and become the law for the next four years.

The operating grain and cotton farmer, especially the wheat man, should find the future a little better. The bill provides for an expanded price support, contingent on acreage reduction and other things. These new supports cruised through the House safely and could mean more money to agricultural sections in coming years.

But as an effort to transfer the price correction to the open market the bill is a failure. It is because the bakery interests, the grain handling interests and others successfully attacked the price support increase as a bread tax. The administration did not have the strength to make a fair

It made a great city of New York and it opened the untenanted old Northwest, contributing mightily to the growth of the nation. It even helped win World War II. When the submarine menace along the Atlantic threatened the shipment of grain and oil, a great deal of that traffic was routed up the Mississippi, into the Great Lakes and down to the seaboard through the canal. It also permitted the lake states to build landing barges and shallow draft ships of war which were also delivered to the Atlantic via the canal.

Today it still does business, albeit fine highways run along its banks on one side and railroads compete a few yards away on the other side.

All of which is to say that available evidence is never sufficient to kill a good idea and no one should be too quick to brand imagination as folly.

grain price an open market problem. It was required to provide for the farmer's increase out of government tax money. The farmer will thus receive his benefit, but the farm problem remains as it was. If subsidies are to be the solution to fair price then at least for another year it will be the government that has to pay it.

The successful effort by private interests to escape the new higher price for wheat certificates was really to say that the producer need not expect anyone in the handling and processing of his product to help him get the price he must have to remain healthy and solvent. This is disillusioning for those who believe price adjustments should come from the open market and not from the government. They have had notice that any such arrangement is not going to be easy.

A New Constitution

The clearest evidence that the time has come for another constitutional convention in Nebraska is the avalanche of 17 proposed constitutional amendments which the Legislature has placed on the 1966 general election ballot. No Legislature has ever presented more amendments to the electorate for a decision. Obviously, the voters cannot possibly be well-informed on such a scattering of issues when they go to mark their ballots more than a year hence.

Among the amendments are a number of major proposals, to require state aid to schools once a broadened tax base becomes effective; to permit public transportation of private and parochial students; to limit the governor to two consecutive terms; two amendments to liberalize the state's investment policies, two amendments changing the requirements for legislative reapportionment, one of which would specifically permit crossing county boundaries in drawing legislative districts.

Most of the proposed amendments would remove or ease antiquated restrictions in the state constitution, a document which was written in 1875 and amended exactly 100 times since. Forty-one of the amendments were submitted to the people by Nebraska's last constitutional convention which met in 1919-20. Eleven amendments were adopted between 1875 and 1919, and 48 have been accepted (out of 74 submitted) since 1920.

The clearest indication of the trend toward more amendments comes with an examination of the record since 1952. Some 51 amendments have been submitted to the voters in the past 13 years, and 40 were adopted. The action of the 1965 Legislature only shows that the trend toward more change in the constitution is accelerating to the point where a convention is now necessary.

The people cannot summon a constitutional convention by their own hand; it is one of the few powers which they do not hold in Nebraska. First, the issue must win two-fifths approval in the Legislature. Then the question is submitted to the electorate for its consideration.

Farm Bloc Bucking Meany's Opposition

WASHINGTON — Midwest farm belt senators are seriously considering a blocking action against labor's drive to eliminate section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley act and the right-to-work laws until George Meany lifts his ban on the sale of U.S. wheat to Russia.

Almost single-handed, George Meany has blocked the sale of even a bushel of wheat from our huge 800,000,000 bushel carryover. Meanwhile, other wheat-growing countries have sold Russia a total of 6,900,000 tons.

Argentina and Australia have sold so much that they've announced they're out of wheat. Russia has scraped the bins bare. Canada completed a whopping half-billion dollar sale two weeks ago. France has sold most of its surplus to Russia.

American farmers are expanding their planting. Meanwhile American wheat farmers are due to contract acreage.

Reason why not a single bushel of American wheat has been sold to the Soviet is because Meany, backed by Paul Hall of the Maritime Union, has demanded that one-half of U.S. wheat sales to communist countries be sent in American bottoms.

There is no law to support this labor demand. It's enforced solely by the power to strike, plus Meany's influence at the White House.

And what makes farm belt senators sore is that Meany does not require

American machinery shipped to Russia to be sent 50 percent in American bottoms; nor does he put a shipping restriction on any other commodity to communist nations. He and the Maritime Union have singled out only grain. Meany seems to have a fetish regarding grain and communist countries. He also has a hold over Paul Hall of the Maritime Union, a rough-and-tumble labor leader considered the man inside the AFL-CIO high command best qualified to combat Jimmy Hoffa and the Teamsters.

The difference is so prohibitive that no American wheat is being purchased.

Last year, Secretary Freeman got around this cost by boosting the export subsidy on durum wheat—which he can do under the law—from 16 cents to 39 cents per bushel. In other words, the Russians were paid a subsidy when they bought durum wheat, which took care of the extra cost of shipping in U.S. vessels.

RUDOLF CLAUSIUS

Profiles In Science

The 19th century was a time of enormous progress in applied science as well as in pure science. One of the principal efforts, we all know, was made in the development of machines that converted heat into mechanical force or "work."

Invention of the steam engine was a great step forward for civilization. For the first time men were able to use, systematically and purposefully, sources of energy other than the traditional ones of muscle power, the force of the wind or falling water.

According to most historians of economics, modern civilization in North America and Europe could never have evolved as it has if men had been satisfied with the machines that depended on these primitive sources of power.

The "science" of heat and work is known as thermodynamics. Rudolf Clausius (1822-1888) was important in its development in the 19th century.

Clausius was one of the most regarded mathematicians of his age and was professor of physics at Royal Prussian Artillery and Engineering School in Berlin.

The theory of how heat makes engines work (the motive power of heat) is embraced in two "laws," the first and second laws of thermodynamics. They defeated the old idea that every object contains a certain amount of heat—in a liquid called caloric—and substituted for it the idea that heat and energy, or heat and work, are much the same thing.

Clausius formulated the second law of thermodynamics. In simplified terms it holds that, although cooling is part of the process of heat exchange, energy is not derived from it. You get energy and work from heating.

Clausius did monumental work in developing the thermodynamics engineering and physics known today.

In 1865 he published the first book that treated thermodynamics as a separate field of study.

thing, a physical force.

The first law of thermodynamics holds that the mechanical force that is generated by heat is in strict relation to the amount of heat used up and that equal amounts of mechanical force use equal amounts of heat.

Clausius said: "It is impossible for an independent engine to convey heat from a cooler object to a warmer one."

Lord Kelvin elaborated this by saying it is not possible to derive work, or mechanical effect, from cooling an object below the temperature of the coolest of the objects adjacent to it.

Castro Chooses Moscow

By PIERRE J. HUSS

(Note: William O. Dobler, The Star's editor, is on vacation. Today's column is by the international news analyst, Pierre J. Huss.)

NEW YORK—Experts on the Caribbean area have come to the conclusion that the mysterious disappearance of Ernesto "Che" Guevara from the hierarchy of Fidel Castro indicates the bearded communist dictator has decided to cast Cuba's lot with Moscow and against Peking.

The wolfish Che, a trained terrorist and crafty revolutionary, considered the mastermind of Castro's revolt and spokesman for Latin American communists, to boot

was dismissed without fanfare from his post as minister for industry. A year ago this would have been impossible, and his ousting might even have precipitated the downfall of Castro himself. But Red politics and world events change, tossing into discard those who stand in the way. So it happened that the ruthless Che stood in the way of political pressures and changes in Cuba's drift, and had to go. Those who knew the professional Argentinian revolutionary of many bloody deeds in Latin America said he saw the Cuban revolution only as the stepping-stone to communist seizure of power in all of South America.

Since force more than slow subversion by sabotage and agitation was the essential instrument of his plot for conquest, he learned far more heavily toward the Chinese communists than toward the Russians. He was favoring the support and activity in Cuba of Chinese Red agents so openly in months preceding his disappearance that Moscow finally must have demanded Guevara's head as the price for granting Castro the money and economic aid needed by him so desperately.

A Moscow promise of larger money gifts and economic aid would hardly be enough in itself in the face of a heavy loss to Castro of his most fervent revolutionary partner. So it is entirely possible that Moscow also gave silent endorsement to Castro's plans for spreading subversion and revolt throughout Latin America, but without involving his own troops except those disguised as volunteers and agents trained in terror and sabotage.

The experts tell me that in any case, Castro never was too enthusiastic with the expansion of the Peking influence in Latin America and the constant arrival in Havana of "trade" or "technical" groups from Red China. They were getting into his hair at the same time Soviet suspicion and even alarm began to push him toward the choice of dealing with Moscow or Peking. I am told that Castro never displayed any doubts that in the final analysis he had to depend on Moscow for survival and that to him was the Red dragon in a remote part of the world. That sort of mentality and outlook were bound to lead him into a direct clash with Che.

Castro has a long memory. He still burns over the humiliating treatment he got from Nikita Khrushchev, who settled the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 at the expense of Fidel and his cohorts. They were the laughing stock and the scapegoats who had been cast aside with impunity by the Russian when the U.S. said "Boo!" That made it easy for Che to swing the Chinese communists to the forefront.

He cannot spread a communist revolt over part or all of Latin America unless he has back of him the giant of that movement and conspiracy—and that is the Soviet Union. Although the

He has faded in popular minds, perhaps, as the national image of the liberator and champion of the downtrodden, but Moscow needs him as much as he needs Moscow if communism is to remain a future force and influence on this side of the Atlantic.

Finally, the Soviets can hardly have the intention or desire to part with their most formidable outpost so firmly implanted 90 miles off the North American coast, or cast aside a satellite willing to march in step with them rather than with the Peking warlords. Under these circumstances, the sacrificing of Che by Castro and the new deal by Moscow with Castro should hardly come as a surprise.

The late President Kennedy first made an oral commitment to Meany that if American wheat were sold to Russia, half of it would move in American bottoms. President Johnson has felt bound by this oral commitment. However, this means a difference in cost of $9.25 to move a ton of wheat from the Gulf of Mexico to the Black Sea on a foreign vessel and $18 on a U.S. flag ship.

The difference is so prohibitive that no American wheat is being purchased.

Last year, Secretary Freeman got around this cost by boosting the export subsidy on durum wheat—which he can do under the law—from 16 cents to 39 cents per bushel. Profiles In Science

The 19th century was a time of enormous progress in applied science as well as in pure science. One of the principal efforts, we all know, was made in the development of machines that converted heat into mechanical force or "work."

Invention of the steam engine was a great step forward for civilization. For the first time men were able to use, systematically and purposefully, sources of energy other than the traditional ones of muscle power, the force of the wind or falling water.

According to most historians of economics, modern civilization in North America and Europe could never have evolved as it has if men had been satisfied with the machines that depended on these primitive sources of power.

The "science" of heat and work is known as thermodynamics. Rudolf Clausius (1822-1888) was important in its development in the 19th century.

Clausius was one of the most regarded mathematicians of his age and was professor of physics at Royal Prussian Artillery and Engineering School in Berlin.

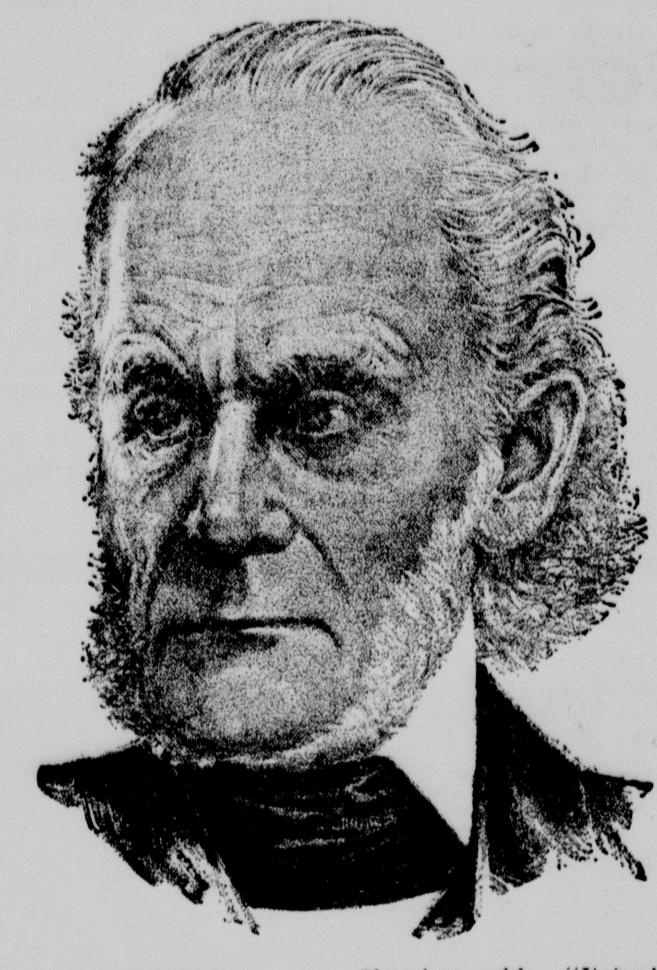

The theory of how heat makes engines work (the motive power of heat) is embodied in two "laws," the first and second laws of thermodynamics. They defeated the old idea that every object contains a certain amount of heat—in a liquid called caloric—and substituted for it the idea that heat used up equal amounts of heat.

Clausius formulated the second law of thermodynamics. In simplified terms it holds that, although cooling is part of the process of heat exchange, energy is not derived from it. You get energy and work from heating.

Clausius did monumental work in developing the thermodynamics engineering and physics known today.

In 1865 he published the first book that treated thermodynamics as a separate field of study.

Copyright, 1965, Los Angeles Times

Clausius said: "It is impossible for an independent engine to convey heat from a cooler object to a warmer one." Lord Kelvin elaborated this by saying it is not possible to derive work, or mechanical effect, from cooling an object below the temperature of the coolest of the objects adjacent to it.

Clausius did monumental work in developing the thermodynamics engineering and physics known today. In 1865 he published the first book that treated thermodynamics as a separate field of study.

Resolutions For New School Year

By DR. LESLIE J. NASON
What will this new school year bring?

"This year I'm going to do better and get good grades," say thousands of students.

But being determined to do better is not enough. Those who rely on this alone will drift back into old ways before many days have passed.

To be effective, resolutions must be specific. And with each, there should be a plan of action for carrying it out.

The following affirmations have helped other students establish habits which led to greater success.

I will learn as much as I can in each course, not just carry out assignments. Sometimes, when there is no assignment in a class for the next day, 15 or 20 minutes of thinking about what you have learned in the course and what is coming up next, is valuable.

I will make a list for each course of the things I must complete. I will jot down the "due date" of each one, plan on completing the assignments every opportunity I

Record Gives Demos A Lead

By LOUIS HARRIS
It is now apparent that the legislative record of the first session of the 89th Congress has given the Democrats a significant lead for the 1966 bi-year elections.

If the elections were being held this year instead next, there could be a distinct possibility that the Democrats could win by a margin of 58 to 52%.

Greater than in any election of the past generation, the Democratic lead today over the GOP for Congress is now running at a margin of 58 to 52%.

A cross section of the nation's voting public was asked:

"If the 1966 election for Congress were being held right now, and if you had to make up your mind, would you vote for the Republicans or Congress in this district or the Democrats?"

Undecided Undecided
old Vote: Democratic 43% 58%
Republican 32% 42%
Not sure 25% 0%

While the undecided totals are still high, though not uncommonly so this far before an election, the meaning of the big Democratic lead is clear. The current 58-42% edge compares with this trend since 1952:

VOTE FOR CONGRESS 1952-1966
Democratic Republican
1952 (Poll) 58% 45%
1954 55% 45%
1956 52% 48%
1958 54% 46%
1960 56% 44%
1962 51% 49%
1964 52.5% 47.5%
1966 50% 50%

Only the Democratic sweep of 1958 approximates today's indicated outcome. Significantly, the Democrats would carry a sizable majority of the vote for House seats in every region of the country and would keep the seats they won in suburban districts in 1964.

In order to probe deeper than the simple pairings of Republicans vs. Democrats, voters were given five arguments which the Republicans might make to persuade voters to cast their ballots for them and five other arguments which the Democrats might be expected to use in the Congressional election.

The cross section of voters was asked:

"I want to read you some reasons that have been given for voting Republican in 1966 for Congress, governor or U.S. senator. For each, tell me if you tend to agree or disagree."

REPUBLICAN ARGUMENTS
Agree Disagree
More Republicans in Congress will keep the Democrats on their toes 74% 26%
The government is too big, now with the Democrats too powerful 45% 55%
Elections Republicans next year will prove the Republican Party leads better people in control of the party 42% 58%
Johnson has gone too far on domestic policy 39% 61%
Johnson has gone too far on foreign policy 32% 68%

The most telling Republican line by far is to point out that when more GOP candidates are returned to Congress, the Democrats will be better kept on their toes. Tied to this is the negative side of the same question that the present government is too much under the domination of one party. On both of these scores, the GOP does better than its current vote showing of 42 to 58%.

Significantly, potential Republican criticism of President Johnson's program in a frontal way would appear likely to lose rather than gain votes.

On the Democratic side, these arguments were put forth:

"Now I want to read some reasons that have been given for voting Democratic in 1966 for Congress, governor or U.S. senator. For each, tell me if you tend to agree or disagree."

DEMOCRATIC ARGUMENTS
Agree Disagree
Johnson can get his domestic program through a Democratic Congress 79% 21%
Johnson will need Democratic support on foreign policy 73% 27%
President Johnson and the Democrats have done a good job and deserve to be re-elected 58% 42%
In troubled times, the President and Congress should be the same party 32% 68%
The Republican party is still too close to Goldwater to be trusted 31% 69%

Clearly, a Democratic tactic of trying to pin the Goldwater label on the GOP for 1966 might backfire badly. By the same token, the Democrats would be in trouble if they tried to claim that the President should have his party in control of Congress because of the crisis in Viet Nam.

The telling Democratic arguments are that the President's legislation will be passed if Democrats are returned to Congress and that Johnson will need Democratic support in foreign policy. In other words, the more the Democrats stress the concrete gains which will be derived at home and abroad by backing up President Johnson, the stronger they appear.

The outlook certainly is not bright for the Republicans as 1966 begins to hover into view. But well over a year has yet to pass, including another congressional session. Furthermore, a change in the state of the economy or a decisive setback abroad history has shown, could alter the whole picture. Finally, past experience has been that in off-year elections the mood of the electorate is to seek a balance by turning to the out party. Up to now, however, there is little sign this historic trend has yet begun to set in.

Torrential Rains Cap French Riviera's Season Of Woe

Nice France — The French Riviera has had about every kind of bad luck this year except a flood—and Sunday it seemed nature was trying to supply that too. A violent day-long wind and rain storm swept into a large area around Nice, routing campers, interrupting traffic and blocking roads. No casualties were immediately reported.

The storm capped a season of widespread forest and bush fires, an accidental oil spillage on the Cannes beaches by a U.S. warship, and an anti-nudity campaign by police. Hotel keepers have been complaining about unfilled rooms and a lack of big spenders, as record numbers of Frenchmen lined the highways toward neighboring Spain.

The torrential rains, coming down during the busiest part of the season will no doubt dilute profits even more.

Among other untidy tasks, Nice firemen struggled to remove the body of a dead cow from the beach. It apparently had washed down a small stream nearby.

The bidding:

Pass 2♦ Pass 4♦

Opening lead — two of diamonds

Most players bid naturally, using very few artificial conventions, but there is no doubt that some artificial conventions not in general use gain points when the particular situation for which the convention was devised comes along.

One of the most dramatic illustrations of this occurred in the match between Italy and the United States in 1959.

When Belladonna and Avarelli were North-South for Italy the bidding went as shown. The two diamond bid by Belladonna was artificial. It showed a three-suited hand with either 5-4-4-0 or 4-4-4-1 distribution and at least 17 points in high cards. An opening two club bid would have had the same meaning except that the point count would then have been 12 to 16.

The two spade response showed a weak hand including at least four spades. (With 7 or more points Avarelli would have responded two notrump obliging Belladonna to bid his singleton or void and thus indirectly identify the three suits he actually had.)

Belladonna jumped to four spades, since he had every reason to believe that his partner would make at least ten tricks. Actually, Avarelli made five spades, by means of a cross ruff and scored 450 points.

When the American North-South pair played the hand the bidding went:

East South West North

Pass Pass Pass 1♦

Pass Pass Pass

North went down one—50 points—and the outcome was that the United States team lost 500 points on the deal.

It is not easy to pin the blame for theasco on either North or South for bidding as they did and winding up in a terrible contract. Actually, according to stand and methods neither of them did anything terribly wrong. The hand lent itself to the Italian style of bidding and most fair minded critics of that time looked upon the result as just an unfortunate occurrence.

BRIDES

at afternoon ceremonies

White gladioli trees and lighted candles created the background for the wedding of Miss Patricia Dee Schmadeke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd C.
Schiadeke, and Joel Meier, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Meier of Minden, which will place on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 22, at the First Presbyterian Church.

Miss Jane Marie Schmadeke of Albion, the maid of honor, and bridesmaids Miss Sarah Meier of Minden; and Mrs. David Meyers, and Miss Emmogene Dunham, appeared in alike Empire costumes of georgette crepe over taffeta, in the cherry pink rose.

Robin Snider of Denver served as best man, and seating the guests were William Meier of Minden; Allen Plummer of Chicago; Tom Merrick of Fremont, and Diane Schmadeke.

For her wedding the bride chose a gown of heavy satin. Worn under a voluminous, sleeveless coat which extended into a train, the gown was designed with an Empire bodice fashioned with a bateau neckline and elbow-length sleeves, and patterned with pearl-embroidered lace. A satin pillbox held to the head her shoulder-length veil of silk illusion, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and strands of ivy.

After Sept. 3, Mr. Meier and his bride will reside at the 111 North Apartments, 111 No. 56th St.

The bride attended the University of Nebraska, where she is a member of Delta Gamma sorority, and received her degree in Dental Hygiene, and her Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Missouri. Mr. Meier, who served in Puerto Rico as an instructor in the Peace Corps from 1963 to 1964, is a graduate of the University of Nebraska where he is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, and where he is director of intramurals.

DEAR ABBY: We are having a heartbreaking problem at our house. Our 17-year-old son is being blamed for getting a 17-year-old girl pregnant. We know the girl's parents well and they have had a lot of heartache from this girl as she has been boy-crazy since the age of 13.

BRUNETTE: The girl claims our son is responsible for her condition. Our son says he isn't sure as there are others in the picture, too. But rather than name a lot of his friends and make a scandal, he will marry the girl. We are able to help our son financially and are willing to do so if he marries her, but he doesn't love her and with this kind of start their chances for a lasting marriage are slim.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you about a friend of mine. He insists on washing his hair every single day. I am afraid if he doesn't quit washing his hair so much he will go bald before he is 20 (He is 17). He has a very nice head of hair, but he is worrying me sick. Could you please advise this boy through your column. He never misses it.

DEAR FRIEND: If your friend has a normal, healthy head of hair, washing it daily will do it no harm. Contrary to your fears, those who keep their hair cleanest, keep it longest.

Troubled: Write to ABBY

dressed envelope.

church ceremony

For the wedding of Miss Linda McLaughlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Corbin, and Robert Knopp, which took place Sunday afternoon, Aug. 22, bouquets of white gladioli decorated the altar of Friedens Lutheran Church. The service was solemnized at 2:30 o'clock by the Rev. Herman Goede, and Mrs. Norma Bussong, organist, played the wedding music. The vocal soloist was Mrs. Glenda Mahagan.

Miss Wanda Hoffart, as the maid of honor, and Miss Sharon Martin, the bridesmaid, wore slim-skirted frocks of mist blue taffeta and carried crescent bouquets of white roses.

Serving Mr. Knopp as best man was Vic Dolberg, and the ushers were Gary Kurtzer, Steve Loos and Alex Walter.

The bride's gown of white silk taffeta was designed in the princess mode. The V neckline of the long-sleeved bodice was highlighted with appliques of re-embroidered lace, and the lace formed two vertical panels down the front of the skirt, which was draped into back fullness and continued into a chapel train. Her illusion veil was held by a pearl coronet, and she carried a modern arrangement of pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Knopp will make their home at 2328 So. 35th.

from Colorado visits Lincoln

Boulder, Colo., who were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Knapple's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Joyce.

As a matter of fact Mrs.

Knapple and the children arrived a few days ahead of Mr. Knapple who joined his family here a week ago, and the foursome then went to Omaha for a brief visit with Mr. Knapple's family. Then the visitors returned to Lincoln — and left yesterday to return to Boulder.

Miss Peggy Louise Prier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Prier, became the bride of James R. Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wagner, all of Ord, at a candlelight ceremony solemnized Sunday evening Aug. 22. The Rev. Lyle Graff read the lines of the 8 o'clock service at the First Presbyterian Church in Ord.

Frocked in sheaths of lavender crystalette and carrying wand arrangements of white roses were Miss Rikk Prier, as her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, Miss Mary Gudmundsen, Ord; Miss Vicki Cline, Gothenburg; and Mrs. Steve Kellison, Lincoln sister of the bridegroom.

Charles Zabel, Cambridge served as best man, and the ushers were Steve Kellison, Lincoln; Bob Sevenker, Doug Zikmund; Allen Cetak, Don Zikmund, Tom Sevenker and Dale Meha, all of Ord.

Floral appliques of Alencon lace trimmed
the bride's gown of white peau desonse.
A bateau neckline and elbow sleeves accented the basque, and the slim skirt was completed by a panel train of the silk. Her veil of French illusion was held by a crown of pearls and crystal drops and her cascade bouquet was fashioned of white pompon chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner will live in Lincoln, where the bride, a member of Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Upsilon Omicron attends the University of Nebraska. Mr.
Wagner is a student at the Milford Technical School.

Alaska Trip

Mrs. William H. Hase-broock of West Point, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will make an official visit to women's clubs in Alaska this week.

Mrs. Hasebroock, accompanied by her husband, State Senator W. H. Hasebroock, arrived at Juneau on Sunday, when she was honored at a reception at the governor's mansion for which Mrs. William A. Egan, wife of Alaska's governor, was hostess.

suburban areas

This morning the suburban set is entertaining guests from around the country.
Vacationers and hosts seem to exchange roles as each repays the other—this summer the next, or maybe in five years.

CASINO HEIGHTS

There is party news from Casino Heights. Mr. and Mrs. David Robinson set the table for eight last Friday evening when they entertained house guests. Their guests were Mr. Robinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs.
Jacob Robinson, of Ocean Springs, Miss.
We, so far, have mentioned four of the eight who surrounded the dinner table. For the other four we will need to mention the visiting couple's other son and daughter-in-law.
Mr. and Mrs. Max Robinson of Seward, and Mr. Robinson's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson of Osceola.

The evening entertainment consisted of a slide-showing by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Robinson. The Mississippi couple vaca-tioned in Bermuda last year and shared their pictures this year with the family.
The Robinsons left Casino Heights on Thursday.

SKYLINE TERRACE

We learned that there was weekend entertaining in Skyline Terrace. Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Gast had as their weekend guests Mrs. Gast's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Mallette of Wayne. Also there for the weekend were Mrs. Gast's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Roeder of Hartington.

WEDGEWOOD MANOR

A busy host and hostess in Wedgewood Manor during the past two weeks have been Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hendricks of 158 Wedgewood Dr. Visiting the Hendricks' home last week was their grandson Tom Hahn of La Grange, Ill. Their visitors this week were their niece and nephew, Mr.
and Mrs. Wilburn Smith of Oakland, Calif.

There also is travel news from Wedgewood. Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Nantkes and their children, Jan and Jerry, have just returned from a one-week vacation through Yellowstone, Jackson Hole and the Tetons Mountain area. Traveling with the Nantkes family were Mr. and Mrs. Al
Kurle, also of Lincoln.

Moving from the Wedgewood Manor area this week was Mrs. Editha Evertts, who left 147 Wedgewood to reside at 145
So. Western in Champaign, Ill.

at afternoon ceremonies

White gladioli trees and lighted candles created the background for the wedding of Miss Patricia Dee Schmadeke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Schmadeke, and Joel Meier, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Meier of Minden, which took place on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 22, at the First Presbyterian Church.

Miss Jane Marie Schmadeke of Albion, the maid of honor, and bridesmaids Miss Sarah Meier of Minden; and Mrs. David Myers, and Miss Emmagene Dunham, appeared in alike Empire costumes of georgette crepe over taffeta, in the cherry tone. Each carried a single long-stemmed pink rose.

Robin Snider of Denver served as best man, and seating the guests were William Meier of Minden; Allen Plummer of Chicago; Tom Merrick of Fremont, and a d Thane Schmadeke.

For her wedding the bride chose a gown of heavy satin. Worn under a voluminous, sleeveless coat which extended into a train, the gown was designed with an Empire bodice fashioned with a bateau neckline and elbow-length sleeves, and patterned with pearl-embroidered lace. A satin pillbox held to the head her shoulder-length veil of silk illusion, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and strands of ivy.

After Sept. 3, Mr. Meier and his bride will reside at the 111 North Apartments, 111 No. 56th St.

The bride attended the University of Nebraska, where she is a member of Delta Gamma sorority, and received her degree in Dental Hygiene, and her Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Missouri. Mr. Meier, who served in Puerto Rico as an instructor in the Peace Corps from 1963 to 1964, is a graduate of the University of Nebraska where he is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, and where he is director of intramurals.

BRUNETTE

DEAR BRUNETTE: Keep your eyes and ears open. Eventually, he will speak to someone you know. And when he does, let that person know (subtly) that you would like to meet him. But don't let HIM know you are "dying" to meet him — or you'll be a dead duck.

The Great American Vacation season is just about over. Down at the village store, the returned housewives are wearing leggy shorts. Gandering each other's sun tan. "Hmmm. She must have spent the whole time lying here baking!" My own time in the sun was the usual bust. I took an easy half hour the first day. Good. An easy half hour two more days. Got a faint touch of protective gold. Golden boy.

The fourth day I was writing. I could only get about 20 minutes on the Hawaiian beach. And by nightfall, I was lobster-red. Could hardly put my shirt on. What kind of a sun is that?

For three days I do the protective coating. The fourth day I do less time in the sun. And I burn like I was made of paper.

For years I've played the sun game and still am not winners.

There was a doctor on the beach—looked to me like one of those rich medics who treat fashionable ladies for sinus. Wore swim trunks with an Italian label.

Anyway, I braced him. He gave me a little double-talk about "triggered reaction." Not much help. He was anointing himself with some very ordinary, advertised brand of lotion.

I am a fatalist. Some tan. Some burn—that's me.

Eventually we all got brown. The whole family got brown enough we could have got in a Hopi rain dance if you put feathers in our hair.

Some of us burned first. Some tanned without heat. (I notice the nice people suffer most. Why is that?)

The mosquitoes bit one child. Wouldn't sink a fang in the other.

Walking on crushed lava was murder on my feet. Other people walked on it barefoot and said: "You come to a lovely place like this and all you do is complain."

I said to the oldest child—the girl the mosquitoes bit: "My dear, once upon a time there was a princess. They put a pea under her mattress. And she could not sleep."

She was so delicate she felt the pea right through the mattress.

"On the other hand," I said, "there was a little chick claimed to be a princess. But she was not. She was mighty common. And when they put a pea under her mattress, she carked off without feeling it at all."

"This common type," I said, "is the kind that can walk barefoot on crushed lava and never sunburns."

"Also mosquitoes won't bite them. Their blood is common—like two-year-old whiskey."

That's telling them.

It is very chic to come home bronzed. Clear of eye. Wearing leg-revealing shorts. Even when the weather is chill as a past due notice.

The Hawaii tourist people give out little warnings on their glorious sun:

"Tan gradually. Ten minutes the first day. Ten minutes the second day . . ."

I added this up once. It comes out to two hours and 20 minutes for a two-week vacation. And if you did this, you would come home and people would think you did your vacation in a root cellar.

"With open mouth he drank the sun
As though it had been wine."

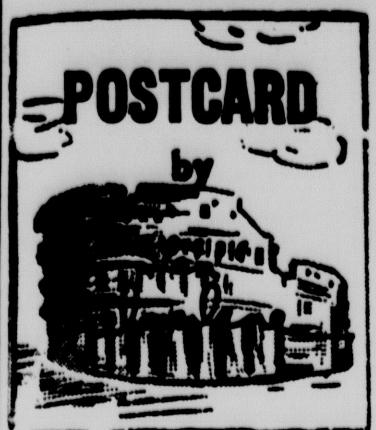

Oscar Wilde said that. Oscar wound up in an awful lot of trouble.

Ag, Immigration Tussles Coming Up

Washington (P)—Those perennial preludes to adjournment, the appropriation bills, are scheduled to move along in Congress this week, but tussles over farm and immigration measures may slow the windup drive.

Morse To Fight

Majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., is asking Senate passage Monday of the $1.3-billion public works money bill.

On Tuesday he lists Senate action on the biggest annual $46.7-billion defense measure, including $1.7 billion in emergency funds to finance the expanding Viet Nam conflict.

In between these the Senate will be asked to put final approval on a hard-fought compromise which would authorize another $3.36 billion foreign aid program already accepted by the House.

Morse To Fight

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., has promised a last-ditch floor protest on this measure.

House leaders scheduled action on minor bills Monday before calling up Tuesday a proposed major overhaul of immigration laws urged by the President.

The new proposal for admitting foreigners to this country as future citizens would quotas to countries based on the national origins of the population as it was in 1890.

A Senate judiciary subcommittee is working on the companion bill and could reach a decision during the week.

President Johnson's aid to higher education is scheduled for House action Thursday. He proposed a $250 million start on grants to needy students, government insurance of loans for collegians, special help to small colleges, and a system of adult education and training in urban areas patterned after the Agricultural Extension Service.

Quadrupling Expected

The House bill would more than double this to $601 million by additions of several other programs and increased funds. Some senators expect

Five Kashmir Raiders Die In Valley Clashes

Srinagar, Kashmir (P)—Five armed raiders were killed and two others killed or seriously wounded in clashes with an Indian army patrol in northern Kashmir Valley, a spokesman announced Sunday.

A dusk-to-dawn curfew in Kashmir Valley and many parts of Jammu state was extended two weeks.

The chiefs of staff of the Indian army and air force, Gen. J. N. Chaudhuri and Air Marshal Arjan Singh, who flew here this weekend with Home Secretary L. P. Singh for high level talks, returned to New Delhi to report to the Indian government.

Kashmir Chief Minister G. M. Sadiq told party workers Sunday the Indian army, which has been on the defensive so far against the raiders, is now poised to take the offensive. He appealed for unity to meet the threat of a "ruthless enemy."

Pakistan Accused

New Delhi, India (P)—Pakistan is attempting to push fresh batches of "infiltrators" into Indian-held Kashmir where guerrilla warfare erupted 17 days ago, the Indian defense ministry charged Sunday.

LCC Offers State's Best Seventh Hole

... WELL-PLACED TEE SHOT NEEDED TO AVOID FLIRTING WITH TRAPS

(Seventh of a Series)
By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

The No. 1 handicap hole on one of the state's most testing golf courses fills the seventh hole spot on the Lincoln Star's Nebraska's Best 18.

The Lincoln Country Club's No. 7 fairway bends to the right off the tee and requires a well placed tee shot to avoid going directly over traps to the green.

A large sand trap guards the entrance on the right side of the green, making a tee shot that lands on the right side of the fairway or in the right rough extremely dangerous for the second shot.

Another trap is to the back of the green on the right and a third trap is to the left side of the green. The traps were less of a factor than they can be for the day amateurs. Charlie Borner and Matt Taber along with LCC pro Bud Williamson played the hole because the pin was to the left front of the green.

The ideal position off the tee is to the left of the fairway, a factor which all three golfers took into consideration.

Borner used a 2 1/2-wood off the tee and was to the left side of the fairway. Both Williamson and Taber used drivers off the tee with Taber going into the left rough beyond both Williamson and Borner. Williamson was 10 yards past Borner on the left side of the fairway.

Borner used a 6-iron for his second shot on the 432-yard, par-4 hole and was just short of the green. His putt from the fringe was just short, giving him a par-4.

Williamson also used a 6-iron for his second shot and reached the front of the green and to the right of the pin. His 28-foot putt for the birdie just missed, falling off to the left by a couple of inches. He then made the tap-in for the par-4.

Taber's long drive left him with a 9-iron second shot to the green, but the ball caught a hanging branch and dropped just short. Taber chipped on and two-putted from seven feet for a bogey-5.

At the completion of seven holes in the series, Taber is eight over par, Borner three over and the pros two over.

MAYS' HOMER TIPS DODGERS

Marichal Raps Roseboro With Bat To Start Fight

... NATIONAL RACE TIGHTENS

By The Associated Press

Juan Marichal turned around and swung his bat at John Roseboro, triggering a free-for-all in the tension-packed Sunday game between the San Francisco Giants and the Los Angeles Dodgers in the tight National League race.

The incident occurred in the last of the third inning with Marichal, star Giant pitcher, at bat against Sandy Koufax, ace of the Dodger staff. After Koufax's second pitch, Roseboro, the Dodger catcher, threw the ball close to Marichal's head in returning it to Koufax.

Marichal turned around and swung his bat at Roseboro. The Dodger catcher threw a punch in return as players poured from both dugouts and engaged in a wild melee. After 14 minutes the field was cleared, Marichal ejected and Roseboro taken out bleeding from a cut over his left eye.

Willie Mays then came up in the same inning with two on and two out and belted his 38th homer over the left center field fence to give the Giants and Ron Herbel, who replaced Marichal, a 4-3 victory.

The Dodgers clung to first place by one percentage point over the Giants and two percentage points over the Milwaukee Braves, who missed a chance to take over the lead by losing to Pittsburgh 5-4 on a bases-loaded walk to Bill Virdon in the 11th inning.

Dick Stuart's eighth inning Homer pulled fifth place Philadelphia to within five games of the top. The blow gave the Phillies a 6-5 victory over the fourth place Cincinnati Reds, who are 2 1/2 games back.

The New York Mets swept a doubleheader from St. Louis, 7-5 and 4-2, and the Chicago Cubs downed Houston 3-1 in the other NL games.

The first place Minnesota Twins lost ground in the American League as Dean Chance of the Los Angeles Angels beat them 4-1. Chance scattered six hits and singled home two runs as he beat the Twins for the first time this season.

The surging runner-up Chicago White Sox made it 10 straight by sweeping a doubleheader from Kansas City 8-3 and 2-1 and climbing within 6 1/2 games of the Twins. Homer paced the Sox in the opener and John Buzhardt wrapped up the nightcap with a four-hitter.

Defending Champion Hiram Bradley, Greenville, Ohio; Bueford Bailey, Big Springs, Neb., and W. C. Everhart, Reno, Nev., posted perfect scores in the shootoff.

Don Demeter's two-run Homer in the second gave Detroit a 2-1 victory over Boston in a five-inning game called because of rain. Cleveland scored three runs in the 10th to down Washington 8-5.

Kansas Wins In All-Star Games, 2-1

Grand Island — Kansas won two of three games from Nebraska in an American Legion Junior baseball all-star series between the two states here Saturday and Sunday.

The two teams split a Sunday doubleheader after Kansas had won the opening game Saturday night.

Nebraska won the afternoon game of the day-night twin bill, 2-1 on Norfolk's Keith Winter's four-hitter. Omaha's Harold Lenz drove in both Nebraska runs with a sharp single in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Nebraska had runners on base in every inning but the first in the night game but couldn't score as Kansas took a 2-0 victory.

LCC Offers State's Best Seventh Hole

... WELL-PLACED TEE SHOT NEEDED TO AVOID FLIRTING WITH TRAPS

(Seventh of a Series)
By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

The No. 1 handicap hole on one of the state's most testing golf courses fills the seventh hole spot on the Lincoln Star's Nebraska's Best 18.

The Lincoln Country Club's No. 7 fairway bends to the right off the tee and requires a well placed tee shot to avoid going directly over traps to the green.

A large sand trap guards the entrance on the right side of the green, making a tee shot that lands on the right side of the fairway or in the right rough extremely dangerous for the second shot.

Another trap is to the back of the green on the right and a third trap is to the left side of the green. The traps were less of a factor than they can be for the day amateurs Charlie Borner and Matt Taber along with LCC pro Bud Williamson played the hole because the pin was to the left front of the green.

The ideal position off the tee is to the left of the fairway, a factor which all three golfers took into consideration.

Borner used a 2 1/2-wood off the tee and was to the left side of the fairway. Both Williamson and Taber used drivers off the tee with Taber going into the left rough beyond both Williamson and Borner. Williamson was 10 yards past Borner on the left side of the fairway.

Borner used a 6-iron for his second shot on the 432-yard, par-4 hole and was just short of the green. His putt from the fringe was just short, giving him a par-4.

Williamson also used a 6-iron for his second shot and reached the front of the green and to the right of the pin. His 28-foot putt for the birdie just missed, falling off to the left by a couple of inches. He then made the tap-in for the par-4.

Taber's long drive left him with a 9-iron second shot to the green, but the ball caught a hanging branch and dropped just short. Taber chipped on and two-putted from seven feet for a bogey-5.

At the completion of seven holes in the series, Taber is eight over par, Borner three over and the pros two over.

Marichal Raps Roseboro With Bat To Start Fight

... NATIONAL RACE TIGHTENS

By The Associated Press

Juan Marichal turned around and swung his bat at John Roseboro, triggering a free-for-all in the tension-packed Sunday game between the San Francisco Giants and the Los Angeles Dodgers in the tight National League race.

The incident occurred in the last of the third inning with Marichal, star Giant pitcher, at bat against Sandy Koufax, ace of the Dodger staff. After Koufax's second pitch, Roseboro, the Dodger catcher, threw the ball close to Marichal's head in returning it to Koufax.

Marichal turned around and swung his bat at Roseboro. The Dodger catcher threw a punch in return as players poured from both dugouts and engaged in a wild melee. After 14 minutes the field was cleared, Marichal ejected and Roseboro taken out bleeding from a cut over his left eye.

Willie Mays then came up in the same inning with two on and two out and belted his 38th homer over the left center field fence to give the Giants and Ron Herbel, who replaced Marichal, a 4-3 victory.

The Dodgers clung to first place by one percentage point over the Giants and two percentage points over the Milwaukee Braves, who missed a chance to take over the lead by losing to Pittsburgh 5-4 on a bases-loaded walk to Bill Virdon in the 11th inning.

Dick Stuart's eighth inning homer pulled fifth place Philadelphia to within five games of the top. The blow gave the Phillies a 6-5 victory over the fourth place Cincinnati Reds, who are 2 1/2 games back.

The New York Mets swept a doubleheader from St. Louis, 7-5 and 4-2, and the Chicago Cubs downed Houston 3-1 in the other NL games.

The first place Minnesota Twins lost ground in the American League as Dean Chance of the Los Angeles Angels beat them 4-1. Chance scattered six hits and singled home two runs as he beat the Twins for the first time this season.

The surging runner-up Chicago White Sox made it 10 straight by sweeping a doubleheader from Kansas City 83 and 2-1 and climbing within 6 1/2 games of the Twins. Homer paced the Sox in the opener and John Buzhardt wrapped up the nightcap with a four-hitter.

Don Demeter's two-run homer in the second gave Detroit a 2-1 victory over Boston in a five-inning game called because of rain. Cleveland scored three runs in the 10th and down Washington 8-5.

The champs got their three runs in the first inning on four hits, two errors and an infield out.

DeWitt scored when pitcher Tad Vergith homered.

Merlin Johnson pitched three innings and Darrel Dubsky four for Kings, allowing four hits.

Kings qualified for a berth in the regional tournament at St. Louis next month.

Kansas Wins In All-Star Games, 2-1

Grand Island — Kansas won two of three games from Nebraska in an American Legion Junior baseball all-star series between the two states here Saturday and Sunday.

The two teams split a Sunday doubleheader after Kansas had won the opening game Saturday night.

Nebraska won the afternoon game of the day-night twin bill, 2-1 on Norfolk's Keith Winter's four-hitter. Omaha's Harold Lenz drove in both Nebraska runs with a sharp single in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Nebraska had runners on base in every inning but the first in the night game but couldn't score as Kansas took a 2-0 victory.

Group Working In Viet Nam Feels U.S. Efforts Justified

Saigon, Viet Nam — A group of American college students who spent their summer in the rice paddies and provinces of South Viet Nam said Sunday they are convinced that U.S. efforts here are basically justified. They are returning home next week.

"Two months in the rice paddies is worth two years in the classroom," said Thomas F. Butler of Bayonne, N.J.

Butler, 27, a graduate student in Asian affairs at Seton Hall University in South Orange, N.J., was one of 19 Americans ranging in age from 23 to 33 who lived and worked with the Vietnamese people.

The students were sent here by the U.S. government as field representatives of the United States Operations Mission (USOM), an aid program under the auspices of the Agency for International Development.

With few exceptions, they said that critics of U.S. policies in Viet Nam, especially students who are spearheading protests across the United States are ill-informed.

Had Been Neutral

Allan A. Samson, 25, a Chicago native and University of California student at Berkeley, said he had been neutral toward the U.S. commitment in Viet Nam.

At first I thought our presence here might touch off another world war. Now I believe if we withdraw, North Viet Nam will take over South Viet Nam and Communist China will gobble up all of Southeast Asia," Samson said.

"I agree that it's just as bad for U.S. troops to kill as it is for the Viet Cong. But killing will go on in this country even if the United States pulled out," he added.

William Kincaid, 25, of Honolulu, an international relations major at American University in Washington, D.C., called the U.S. role here the testing ground of our commitment to develop the backward nations of the world. If we don't do it in South Viet Nam, we'll be forced to do it elsewhere."

Most of the students, eight of whom are candidates for doctoral degrees, acknowledged that they were in support of U.S. policies in Viet Nam before they arrived.

Serious Doubts

One student, however, Theodore M. Smith, 24, a Fullerton, Calif., native who attends the University of California at Berkeley, said he had had serious doubts about what the United States was doing in Viet Nam.

Now I'm more confused than ever before," Smith said. "I've spoken to hundreds of Americans, both military and civilian, and everyone seems to have a different opinion. I've concluded one doesn't have to visit South Viet Nam to comment intelligently on U.S. policy here."

Dale B. Pfeiffer, 24, of Riverside, N.J., who attends Michigan State University at East Lansing, Mich., complained that students opposing U.S. involvement in Viet Nam "are not protesting the war, but just protesting to protest."

I'd like it better with less military aid and more civilian help," he added, but as it stands now Viet Nam needs the military support most."

Refresher Course For State Nurses Available Aug. 30

A six-week refresher course for registered nurses will be available to all nurses throughout the state on Aug. 30.

Sponsored by the Lincoln Public Schools, the State Employment Division and the State Vocational Education Division, funds from the Manpower Development and Training Act will pay all costs. These include transportation to Lincoln.

Applicants must apply through their nearest state employment office.

The course is open to nurses who are not currently employed. It may be repeated.

Campaign Meet Draws Two In Norway Camp

Stavanger, Norway, — Seven political parties campaigning for the Sept. 13 general elections in Norway were invited to Vatne Army Camp here to brief officers and soldiers and answer questions.

The action outside Saigon involved about two companies of Viet Cong, perhaps 200 men, who ambushed a government platoon. A U.S. military spokesman said government casualties were high.

Closer to Saigon, a popular force or civilian militia, unit ambushed an unknown number of Viet Cong Saturday night, killing one of the guerrillas and seizing one machine gun. No government losses were reported.

In other action, the Viet Cong destroyed a government watchtower 85 miles south of Saigon in Cai Doi Phong Dinh province. Military spokesmen reported heavy government casualties and no Viet Cong losses.

Units of the U.S. 173rd airborne brigade completed the road-clearing operations in the central highlands from Pleiku to Kontum without firing a shot, a spokesman said.

The operation enabled 50 South Vietnamese army trucks to carry their first supplies to Kontum in five weeks over Highway 14.

A South Vietnamese artillery unit joined the convoy while other Vietnamese units pushed south from Kontum, 40 miles away, to link up with the U.S. paratroopers.

Seventy M.D.s Volunteer To Go To Viet Nam

Chicago — Seventy U.S. physicians have volunteered to go to Viet Nam to help lessen the critical shortage of doctors in that nation.

The American Medical Association is helping recruit doctors for Project Viet Nam, a program requested by President Johnson in response to urgent demands from Vietnamese officials.

In all of South Viet Nam there are only 700 physicians for the 16 million people and 500 of these doctors are in the South Vietnamese army.

Project Director Dr. Edwin W. Brown Jr., said Saturday: "The doctors' response to this project has been very encouraging. We had no idea we is a part of the People-to-People Health Foundation, Inc.

Another mission of People-to-People was Project Hope, the floating hospital designed to bring medical aid where ever it was needed.

So far, Dr. Brown said, recruitment has largely been through AMA publications and periodicals.

"But about 25 voluntary organizations have indicated that they will support work and help us get the manpower we need," he added.

1,000 Protest Brutality In Massachusetts March

Springfield, Mass. — An estimated 1,000 persons marched singing and clapping through the streets lined by National Guardsmen Sunday in a civil rights protest praised by authorities for its orderliness. After the marchers dispersed without incident, Gov. John A. Volpe issued a statement saying he was "relieved and gratified."

The participants marched three abreast and completed a two-mile trek to city hall in about 50 minutes. Then, after speeches protesting

"I thought the CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) people did a good job," Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Ambrose, state adjutant general, said. Mayor Charles V. Ryan termed the day "satisfactory."

Gov. Volpe said a force of National Guard troops would remain on alert at Westfield Armory in case they were needed later in the night.

Averted Trouble

Volpe said he thought Thursday's conference with the march organizers "did much to avert trouble." He said the way of future progress is to "plan and act around the conference table."

Brown charged that the "more important programs just have been shoved and delayed by reason of the inability to determine who's going to run it." He had strong criticism of Congress as well.

Governor Leapfrogged

"Congress in their wisdom or lack of it have leapfrogged the governor in the state administration in this matter . . . These poverty programs originate at the local level . . . They then go back to Washington where they are approved."

Brown complained that the only thing he can do is veto Washington's plans.

The governor rated unemployment as the "number one" cause of the riots. He said there is 30% joblessness in the Watts area.

Brown, in response to a question that stated there were not many Negro policemen in the Los Angeles Police Department, said he thought a "far greater effort" should be made to recruit Negroes.

Statements Of Parker 'Hurt Cause'—Brown

San Francisco, Calif. — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown said Sunday Police Chief William Parker of Los Angeles has by his statements "hurt the whole cause of race relations" in the city where recent Negro riots took 36 lives and caused millions of dollars in property damage.

Gov. Brown, speaking on ABC's "Issues and Answers" radio and television show, rapped what he called a "political war" in Los Angeles and blamed Congress for "leapfrogging" the state in the economic war on poverty.

In response to a question quoting a Washington newspaper editorial as saying Chief Parker has "soffed" at all who espouse civil liberty," Brown said:

"Very unfortunate."

"I do think his (Parker's) statements have been very, very unfortunate. I think they have hurt the whole cause of race relations in Los Angeles. But he's a sincere man. I know he's tried as fully hard to bring about a greater understanding between races."

Negroes in Los Angeles have demanded that Parker be fired.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Texan Wants Appraisal Of His Financial Plans

By Merrylee S. Rukeyser A young professional man, a reader of this column residing in Texas, now in his sixth year of practice, with a projected income of $33,000 a year, asks for an appraisal of his goal and his proposed means of attaining it.

In putting the accent on private accent on school education of his four young Rukeyser sons and a fifth child on the way, the father writes: "I do not wish to do this to the detriment of my own personal welfare." Then he adds: "I don't feel the need for expensive vacations or trips, but do continually to beautify the exterior and interior of our lovely home."

This human communication opens up several vistas. With young children dependent upon him, a family head should legitimately consider his own financial well-being. This is especially so since the main financial asset of a family unit is the breadwinner, and no one is helped by unwise pressures to overwork or to fail to build up a prudent money structure for all of life's vicissitudes, including eventual retirement. The father has tried to guard against contingencies with $133,000 of life insurance, but this sum at interest would bring barely one-sixth of his current annual earned income.

In addition to private school the inquirer is contemplating college for all five children. He asks how much should be set aside monthly for this objective, starting now. The private school tuition is $900 for the first four years and $1,400 for the remaining eight before college.

Inflation is steadily boosting the dollar cost of financing the future of culture. When this writer was a student at Columbia University, the tuition was $5 a point — a point representing one hour of classroom work a week per semester. Less than five years later when I taught finance and journalism at the same university, the rate of tuition doubled to $10 a point and it recently climbed to $57.50 a point. What it will be in 18 years when the yet unborn fifth child of the reader is ready for college is a matter of conjecture.

Though the reader states that he is wary of the market at this level, he should not dismiss from his investment plan the desirability of putting a portion of his portfolio in so-called growth situations — such as common stock and selected real estate. Without such propensity for growth, he may have difficulty in meeting unforeseen higher costs resulting from economic changes in the coming 18 years. Only evidences of ownership offer the promise of participating in long term future economic gains.

As to the possible conflict between the wellbeing of the children and the personal welfare of the father (and presumably his spouse), there is some flexibility in selecting a plan for education prior to college. If the public schools in the Texas community are adequate, the father could avoid paying twice. He is already contributing to public education through his real estate taxes. If he shuns the public schools and pays tuition in private academies, he is really paying twice.

Q.—A reader in Toledo asks about selecting an investment counsel firm.

A.—Most of the reputable investment counsel firms belong to the Investment Counsel Association of America, located at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, to whom I suggest you write for a membership list. The firms which you mention are reputable.

Q.—A reader in Valparaiso, Nebraska asks: "Would you please send me information on Investors' Selective Fund. Do you know who handles this fund in Lincoln, Nebraska? Would you send me a list of 'no load' funds?"

A.—Investors' Selective Fund, putting the emphasis on safety of principal, has put in its portfolio mainly bonds and preferred stocks. At the end of last year, unrealized appreciation was 2% of total net assets. The goal has been to emphasize income and the yield last year was 4%. The fund has not increased through capital gains during the prolonged market upturn of the last ten years as much as in investment companies specializing in growth stocks. You can get the name of local representatives by contacting the home office at 1000 Roanoke Building, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Companies distributed by Investors' Diversified Services, Inc. are not "no load" funds. A list of "no load" funds has been sent you by mail.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning investment problems after his address is known. Envelopes should be sent in care of The Lincoln Star. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Critically Wounded Priest Clings To Life In Montgomery Hospital

Montgomery, Ala. — A critically wounded Catholic priest clung to life in a Montgomery hospital Sunday while the body of another clergyman shot to death Friday in a rural Alabama town was flown home for funeral services.

A spokesman at Montgomery Baptist Hospital said 26-year-old Richard Morrisroe of Chicago is in "very critical" condition.

The reports have not changed since two teams of surgeons operated on the priest for more than 11 hours Friday night, repairing wounds in his right side and abdomen.

Morrisroe was felled by a shotgun blast which killed Jonathan Daniels, 27, a theology student from Keene, N.H.

Friday near a country store at Hayneville, Ala., about 40 miles west of Montgomery.

Stood With Negroes

The shooting came as the white clergymen, who had been doing volunteer civil rights work in South Alabama stood with a group of Negroes. All had been released from the Lowndes County Jail only two hours before the shooting. They had been confined for a week following a civil rights demonstration.

A private plane Sunday flew to New Hampshire with Daniels' body. An Episcopal minister said arrangements for the flight were made by the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity.

Japan Labor Unions Will Protest Sub

Tokyo — Japan's left-wing Federation of Labor unions said Monday it will stage demonstrations to protest the docking of the U.S. nuclear-powered submarine Permit in Sasebo Tuesday.

The 3,750-ton Permit, of the Thresher class, is the fourth nuclear-powered submarine to visit Japan. Each vessel has been greeted by left-wing demonstrations.

The Labor Federation promised rallies in Sasebo 600 miles southwest of Tokyo, throughout the five-day visit and announced a nationwide protest for Thursday.

Nuclear weapons and the danger of radiation remain sensitive issues in Japan, the only nation ever to be hit by atomic bombs. However, the United States has said none of the visiting submarines carries atomic warheads.

The federation, which claims a membership of 4.5 million, said the rallies also will be used to support demands for a U.S. withdrawal from Viet Nam and rejection of a treaty to normalize relations between Japan and South Korea.

Defended Klansmen

Murphy, 51, who gained national attention earlier this year while defending one of three Klansmen charged with murder in the slaying of a white civil rights worker, was killed Friday near Tuscaloosa, Ala., when his car slammed into a gasoline truck.

No one in the crowd wore the white robes of the Klan at the services. Pallbearers were selected from the audience as the service ended and mourners began the long, hot journey to Greensboro, 120 miles away, for burial services.

Ku Klux Klan grand dragons from Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia and Alabama were present for the services, along with the Klans imperial wizard Robert M. Shelton of Tuscaloosa.

Robert Creel, the grand dragon from Alabama, said that most segregationists organizations in the South had representatives at the funeral.

Spoken For All

"Matt had spoken for all of them at one time or another," Creel said. "He will be missed not by just the Klan, but by all people who believe in segregation."

Murphy moved into the national spotlight as he defended Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., of Fairfield, Ala., for the March 25 slaying of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, a Detroit housewife who was killed while returning from the Selma to Montgomery civil rights march.

Mitchell Calls Congressmen 'Oddities'

Kearney — John C. Mitchell, Nebraska Democratic Party chairman, has labelled Congressmen Glenn Cunningham and Dave Martin "isolated oddities completely out of step and touch with the issues which vitally affect the state of Nebraska."

The Kearney Democrat made that statement in noting that the entire Republican congressional delegation from the states of Kansas, South Dakota and North Dakota voted for the omnibus farm bill which gained House passage last Thursday evening.

Substantiating his charge, Mitchell declared, "Republican congressmen from Kansas, North Dakota and South Dakota put aside their partisanship on the farm bill and supported the interests of their agriculturally oriented states by voting for that piece of legislation.

"Here in Nebraska, however, Republican Congressmen Cunningham and Martin were unable to show signs of statesmanship and were likewise unable to rise above political partisanship to support the economic interests of their state. Eight out of ten Republican congressmen in the four plains states of which I speak broke with their party's leadership and supported their state's most important industry."

Only Cunningham and Martin from Nebraska voted against their constituents by voting against the farm bill. They have, in short, demonstrated a complete disregard of Nebraska's economic well-being and a most shocking immunity to the problems of its citizens."

Beatrice To Pay 13% Increase In Taxes Next Year

Beatrice — Taxpayers in the Beatrice area will be paying more than a 13 per cent increase in their taxes next year.

Gage County Assessor E. Lloyd Jones said the new mill levy would be 93.10, compared with 82.07 last year.

He said a breakdown shows a total levy shows the city levy to be up nearly five mills, the school district up two mills and the county up 8.20.

The state levy climbed three mills.

1,000 Protest Brutality In Massachusetts March

Springfield, Mass. (P)—An estimated 1,000 persons marched singing and clapping through the streets lined by National Guardsmen Sunday in a civil rights protest praised by authorities for its orderliness.

After the marchers dispersed without incident, Gov. John A. Volpe issued a statement saying he was "relieved and gratified."

The participants marched three abreast and completed a two-mile trek to city hall in about 50 minutes. Then, after speeches protesting alleged police brutality in arrests of Negroes, some 500 of them turned around and marched back to the school playground where they began.

"I thought the CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) people did a good job," Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Ambrose, state adjutant general, said. Mayor Charles V. Ryan Jr. termed the day "satisfactory."

Gov. Volpe said a force of National Guard troops would remain on alert at Westfield Armory in case they were needed later in the night.

Averted Trouble'

Volpe said he thought Thursday's conference with the march organizers "did much to avert trouble." He said the way of future progress is to "plan and act around the conference table."

When the march started there were about 700 in the ranks, but Capt. James McCarthy of Springfield police said the marchers numbered about 1,000 by the time they reached Court Square.

The two-hour rally protesting alleged police brutality in recent arrests of Negroes was completed without incident.

The marchers then formed ranks to retrace their steps to the school playground where they started.

Brown charged that the "more important programs just have been shoved and delayed by reason of the inability to determine who's going to run it." He had strong criticism of Congress as well.

'Governor Leapfrogged'

"Carcass in their wisdom or lack of it have leapfrogged the governor in the state administration in this matter . . . These poverty programs originate at the local level then go back to Washington where they are approved."

Brown complained that the only thing he can do is veto Washington's plans.

The governor rated unemployment as the "number one" cause of the riots. He said there is 30% joblessness in the Watts area.

Brown, in response to a question that stated there were not many Negro policemen on the Los Angeles Police Department, said he thought a "far greater effort" should be made to recruit Negroes.

Tremendous Success'

Oscar Bright, Springfield chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), described the march and rally as a "tremendous success." He said that after the city hall rally the demonstrators would march back the way they had come.

Parade marshals carrying walkie talkies circulated through the marchers in bright, orange vests.

But there wasn't a hint of trouble along the march route and the only sounds were the singing of freedom songs and the clapping of hands in time to the music.

At city hall, two stake-body trucks had been parked back to back to provide a speaking platform.

Carefully Supervised

The march was carefully supervised by a strong force from the Massachusetts Yankee Division in full battle dress.

Gov. John A. Volpe at the request of city officials dispatched about 2,100 members of the Massachusetts Yankee Division and 100 state troopers to keep order.

Guardsmen in full battle dress with fixed bayonets, some sheathed, some not, lined the streets along the route of march to head off any incidents. Blue helmeted state police mingled with the soldiers and there were 375 Springfield police on hand.

Cyclists Trouble Springfield

RIOT-HELMETED POLICE NAB 75 PERSONS

Springfield, Ill. (UPI)—Seventy-five persons were arrested late Saturday and early Sunday by riot helmet-wearing state and local police guarding against trouble due to an influx of 3,000 motorcyclists from throughout the nation.

State Police Supt. William H. Morris said, "I don't know of any damage and there were no injuries."

However, he said there were several incidents in which cyclists threw beer bottles and cans at troopers and state police cars.

Cyclists came from as far as New York City, Cleveland, Detroit, Louisville, Nashville and St. Louis. They wore jackets identifying themselves as "Outlaws," "Cobras," "Galloping Ghosts," "Gypsy Outlaws," "Throttle Twisters," "Night Riders" and "Death Riders."

Rebels

Morris said most of the troublemakers were "rebels from the AMA (American Motorcycle Association), they guys the AMA won't recognize."

There had been rumors that Southern California's notorious "Hells Angels" would come here for Sunday's 50-mile motorcycle race on the closing day of the Illinois State Fair.

A state trooper said he understood some members of the "Hells Angels" were seen here, but city police, who reported the arrests, said none of those taken into custody were from California.

"Then we would have really had trouble," he said.

Morris said, "They (cyclists) were a little noisy, a few were drunk, but it wasn't bad at all, certainly not as bad as we expected."

Show of Force

"A show of force is all you need with these guys."

State police assigned 15 extra cruisers to the side of the fairgrounds closest to downtown Springfield and assigned 16 troopers to the downtown area. Another 48 troopers stood by at the fairgrounds headquarters.

In a parking lot across the city police station, 30 troopers rehearsed antiriot maneuvers whenever a group of cyclists passed by.

To bolster his show of force, Morris brought in three police dogs — "The meanest dogs we've got. They stayed in their cages the entire night, but they growled a lot."

Police said some cyclists in the city wore jackets inscribed "Hells Angels," but authorized
